Executive Summary

Infinitea: Bubble Tea Subscription Boxes

Our marketing strategy for Infinitea is focused on providing bubble tea subscription boxes to allow bubble tea enthusiasts to enjoy their personalized drinks. The subscription box offers consumers the flexibility to customize their boxes to their preferences and dietary constraints – these subscription boxes are also a convenient and consistent way for consumers to make their drinks in the comfort of their homes and it's also a better option for health-conscious people because they know what ingredients are going into their drinks. Infinitea seeks to increase its market reach while accommodating a range of consumer preferences using the principles of the Marketing Mix, which include product, price, place, and promotion. To ensure customer satisfaction and loyalty, the product line offers a variety of premium teas and customizable options to suit individual tastes. Infinitea targets both consumers on a budget and those looking for high-end experiences with its competitive pricing and customizable subscription plans. Accessibility and brand visibility are improved by strategic placement on online platforms. Additionally, Infinitea wants to capture the interest in its target audience and increase subscription sales through focused advertising campaigns that make use of social media, influencer relationships, and interactive events.

Current Marketing Situation

Market Description

Infinitea's bubble tea subscription box falls within the food and beverage industry, specifically the specialty beverage market. Bubble tea is a well-known drink that has a sweetened taste, and it is made with high-quality milk, sweetener, tapioca pearls, creamer, and several types of tea. Over the past decades, this industry has experienced rapid growth globally due to consumer demand for unique and convenient products, particularly in North America. The industry has become increasingly lucrative, with revenue in North America surpassing $2 billion annually. According to the article of Fortune Business Insights, the global bubble tea market size was valued at $2.29 billion in 2022 and is projected to grow from $2.46 billion in 2023 to $4.08 billion by 2030 (Bubble Tea Market Size, Share, Growth | Industry Trends [2032], n.d.). This industry has seen significant growth due to factors such as the growing popularity of Asian cuisine, health-conscious consumers, and increased social media influence or trends toward unique and customizable beverages. Subscription boxes use this rising trend by offering convenient access to a variety of bubble tea flavours delivered to the consumer's home on a recurring basis. With the increased demand for customizable and unique drinks, bubble tea subscription boxes have the potential to be a lucrative market for entrepreneurs.

Target Market

The target demographic for Infinitea's bubble tea subscription box includes teenagers and young adults, aged 18-35 who enjoy unique flavours and customizable drinks. Within this demographic, the target would be included of consumers who live in big urban cities, who have disposable income, an interest in trying new products and flavours, and who are proficient with technology. This target demographic would include white and blue-collar workers, students, families, childless couples, and single individuals; and the customization possibility would also appeal to and attract health-conscious consumers as well.

Marketing Mix

Product:

- The subscription boxes would be filled with premium ingredients, such as tea bags or tea powders, syrups, toppings, and recipe cards.
- Subscribers have the choice to customize their subscription boxes to cater to their preferences or dietary needs. For example, customers can choose their tea bases, the sweetness level of their syrups, and what kind of toppings they prefer.
- Depending on the season or holiday, each box would include a choice of seasonal flavours to provide the customers with an opportunity to discover new tastes and flavours; this also increases customer satisfaction and excitement.

Place:

- The subscription boxes would only be available online for purchase though either from Facebook or Instagram and would be delivered to the subscriber's home. This online ordering and delivery provide the customer with a convenient and stress-free experience.
- Shipping options would also be flexible to accommodate the customers' preference for delivery frequency and timing.

Promotion:

- Infinites could launch a digital marketing campaign across various social media platforms such as TikTok, Instagram, X (Twitter), and Facebook, to announce their subscription boxes, bring attention to special promotions, and engage with their customers/audience.
- Infinites can also launch an email marketing campaign to communicate with their customers and supply updates about new product launches, and new flavours, and persuade customers to leave feedback and to refer the people around them to subscribe to the bubble tea boxes.

Price:

- Depending on how much a consumer is willing to pay or invest in the subscription box, Infinites would offer a pricing tier to accommodate different budget levels and various levels of personal investment/interest.
- Different discounts and promotions would occasionally be offered to bring in new subscribers/customers and it would also reward loyal/long-time subscribers.

Pricing Tiers:

- Basic Tier - Price: $20/month

This box would include two (2) basic flavors (i.e. Brown sugar milk tea); this box is mostly for consumers who are new to bubble tea drinks and are intimidated by the various other flavors and combinations. This tier would have access to exclusive discounts and promotions that are offered.

- Standard Tier - Price: $30/month

This box would include four (4) bubble tea flavors; two (2) being randomly picked and the other two (2) being left for the subscriber to decide. This tier is for regular consumers who occasionally enjoy and indulge in bubble tea and are not afraid to try new flavors and toppings occasionally. This tier includes limited edition toppings or add-ons and will also include exclusive access to any discounts and/or promotions being offered.

- Premium Tier - $45/month

This box would include six (6) bubble tea flavors; with three (3) being randomly selected, and the other three (3) being left for the consumer to decide. This tier is for consumers who enjoy bubble tea and are on the search to explore new and/or different flavors of drinks – they are not intimidated or afraid of trying new drink combinations and toppings. This tier will provide consumers with specialty and seasonal offerings, high-quality toppings, and add-ons, and will also include early access to new products and exclusive access to discounts and promotions.

Competitive Review

1. Boba Box

Boba Box offers a bubble tea subscription service that includes pre-measured ingredients and recipe cards. The subscription plans are available every month and they also allow customers to add more items and to customize their boxes as well. This brand's subscription can only be bought online through their website and is also shipped and delivered to their subscriber's doors as they do not have a brick-and-mortar store. Boba Box promotes its brand through social media; they currently have Instagram, TikTok, Facebook, and Pinterest as ways to connect with their customers who are also avid bubble tea enthusiasts/consumers.

2. Locca

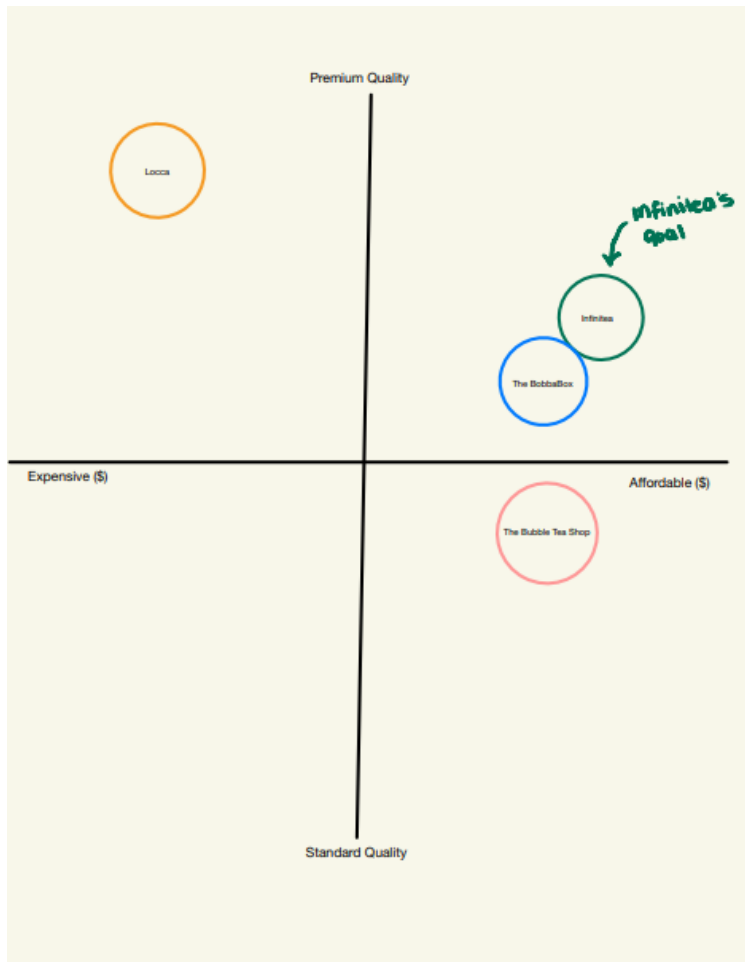

Locca focuses on the premium, high-quality, and sustainably sourced ingredients. Their subscription box includes 2-3 tea bases, tapioca pearls, straws, syrup(s), and their recipe cards. This brand also allows its subscribers to choose their subscription frequency; they have the choice to choose between a weekly, monthly, or bi-monthly frequency. If their customer signs up for recurring deliveries, the brand has a promotion where the subscriber gets ten percent (10%) off their purchase. A weakness this brand has is that they have a limited selection of flavours and customization options compared to other brands like Boba Box or The Bubble Tea Shop. Another weakness Locca has is that they have a higher price point that reflects their premium and high-quality ingredients compared to other brands. This pricing may turn potential and budget-conscious consumers away from their service; customers may want to find another brand that offers the same products and services but at a more affordable price point. Like most businesses, Locca utilizes social media platforms such as Instagram, Pinterest, and Facebook to promote and advertise its brand, products, and services; they also use their platforms to engage with their followers and alert them to any promotions that the brand may be launching.

3. The Bubble Tea Shop (Thebbtshop)

The Bubble Tea Shop is a business that offers DIY bubble Tea boxes along with having two (2) physical stores located in British Columbia. They offer four distinct drink sets (Milk tea set, Bubble tea set, Fruit set and Brown sugar Tea set) that allow their customers to choose their flavours, tea bases, syrup flavours, and toppings. Customers also have the choice to add on extra toppings, teas, fruit syrups, fruit powders, and creamers to their boxes as well as choose if they want any accessories such as reusable straws, reusable tumblers (limited-edition tumblers), and dessert jars to their orders. The Bubble Tea shop also has specialty packs that cater to larger families or consumers that host large groups of people. Their prices are competitive and affordable compared to Locca; their most expensive set being $65 for a part pack and their lowest being $35 for their Family pack (Prices are in Canadian dollars). The Bubble tea shop's biggest strength is how customizable their sets and pack are for their consumers; they give their customers different options to choose from and offer them set size variations to fit their needs and/or match the occasion. A weakness this brand has is that they do not have the option for their consumers to subscribe to the box of their choice; it is a one-time payment and not a recurring payment or recurring frequency. If it is a one-time payment option, potential customers and their loyal customers may not want to go through the process of reordering their boxes, or the customers may even forget to repurchase the products; a one-time payment process does not help The Bubble Tea shop to retain a loyal customer base in the long run and gaining new customers is more expensive than catering to their established and loyal customer base. They promote and advertise their brand, products, and services using social media such as Instagram, Facebook, and X (Twitter). They update their followers on new menu and flavour releases, they promote upcoming (special) events that they host in their stores, and any promotions and sales they might have online or in store.

Positioning Map

External & Internal Company Analysis

Situation Analysis SWOT

Strengths:

1. Convenience: The subscription boxes offer customers the chance to receive their tea bases, flavours, and toppings delivered right to their doors on a scheduled basis. This eliminates the customer's need to visit the physical store and it also eliminates their need to patronize other bubble tea shops.

2. Customization: The boxes can be custom-tailored to cater to the customer's preferences and dietary restrictions; this includes what kind of tea bases they prefer, how sweet they want their drinks to be, and what kind of toppings they would like to be included in the boxes. By providing these personalized options, the consumer is more willing to subscribe to this service.
3. Revenue Predictability: The subscription boxes provide Infinitea with a predictable and recurring source of revenue. This allows for better financial, inventory, and production planning/needs.
4. Specialty: The subscription boxes introduce customers to new drink flavours that they otherwise would not try on their own. It also introduces customers to limited edition/seasonal drinks to sample and make at home. By having a novelty/specialty subscription box, it lets Infinitea tap into the growing trend and popularity of bubble tea; the subscription box also sets the brand apart from its competitors.

Weakness:

1. Product Quality/Freshness: ensuring product quality and freshness of the bubble tea ingredients, especially the perishable ingredients, would be difficult and expensive to maintain. If the ingredients are not fresh and of excellent quality, it would leave their customers unsatisfied and could also potentially decrease Infinitea's revenue/profit.
2. Subscription Cancellations: customers may cancel or pause their subscriptions due to distinct reasons such as no longer being interested in the service, change in preferences, or no longer being able to afford the service. The overall impact of multiple canceled or paused subscriptions can lead to fluctuating revenue and subscriber retention rates.

Opportunities:

1. Market Expansion: The subscription boxes allow Infinitea to enter untapped market segments and it also allows them to reach a larger audience (geographically) beyond its physical location/store.
2. Upselling Opportunities: The subscription boxes can be bundled with other product offerings like merchandise, discounts, or special event access to increase its average order revenue. They also could increase the price of their drink flavours through the subscription boxes compared to the selling price they have in - store.
3. Seasonal Items/Promotions: By Introducing limited-time and/or seasonal subscription boxes with special/unique ingredients that are not available in-store, it would create excitement with its existing customer base and attract new customers to the service.
4. Partnerships and Collaborations: Collaborating with other businesses in the food, lifestyle, and beverage industry can expand the appeal of the bubble tea subscription boxes to reach new customer segments through joint marketing efforts.

Threats:

1. Competition: With the growing popularity and saturation of subscription services, specifically food-related subscriptions, it makes it more difficult for Infinitea to find its place in the market and to also differentiate its brand and product/service offerings from the other beverage-based subscription boxes that are already in the market.
2. Supply Chain Issues: Dependence on external suppliers for bubble tea ingredients and packaging materials increases the risks for Infinitea, especially if shortages happen, or if there is a fluctuation in price or delivery delays; all these risks could have an impact on customer satisfaction.

3. Rules and Regulations: Compliance with food and safety standards, environmental regulations, and shipping regulations are other additional challenges that the subscription boxes face. If meeting these standards and regulations has an increased cost, and if the cost is reflected in the subscription boxes, this could turn current and potential customers away and it would impact Infinites's revenue/profits.
4. Shipping Costs: The shipping costs of the subscription boxes could become expensive depending on whether the subscription should be a domestic service or an international service. If it is confined to a domestic service, the business is limiting its consumer base. And if the shipping price is too expensive, their customer base would be unwilling to subscribe to the service.

Marco Environmental Analysis

Political Factors:

Infinites may run into government regulations and policies that relate to food and safety, and packaging and shipping. Since shipping impacts the quality of the products that Infinites ships to their customers, that would also impact the safety of the ingredients themselves and if it's safe to consume.

Economic Factors:

Like most product or service-based businesses, Infinites's subscription box is susceptible to fluctuating economic conditions such as inflation, unemployment, and changing consumer spending/behaviour. These economic conditions influence the demand for non-essential items like bubble tea subscription boxes. According to the Bank of Canada, the inflation rate in Canada is three percent (3%) (Bank of Canada, n.d.), and Statistics Canada states that the unemployment rate has increased to five-point eight percent (5.8%) in 2024 from five-point one percent (5.1%) in 2023 (Government of Canada, Statistics Canada, 2024). The changing Inflation and increasing unemployment rate do impact consumer purchasing decisions especially when it comes to non-essential items.

Social/Cultural Factors:

Changing consumer preferences does impact this service. There is a growing trend and increasing awareness for more sustainable, healthy, and convenient services and products; this is mostly seen in Millennials (Generation Y), Generation Z, and younger generations – this is compared to older generations like Baby Boomers (Generation X). The increase in health and sustainability that is seen in Millennials and younger generations is because these generations are “racially and ethnically diverse, more culturally liberal, and well versed in technology” (Shelby L. Talbott, Generation Y and Sustainability, 2012). If Infinitea cannot cater to or adapt to these changes towards their target market, they risk losing potential customers and potential revenue/profits.

Technological Factors:

Advancements in technology, such as e-commerce platforms, mobile apps for ordering and delivery tracking, and automated inventory management systems, can enhance operational efficiency and customer experience for Infinitea. By keeping up with technology developments and advancements, Infinitea can have a competitive advantage over other companies offering the same products and service. This will allow for Infinitea to engage more on digital platforms and to adapt to the consumer’s ever-changing preferences.

Marketing Objectives

Short-Term:

- Increase Social Media Presence: Increase followers on the Instagram account by five hundred followers within the first six months through consistent posting and interaction with local followers.
- Launch and Promote Subscription Milk Tea Box: Achieve a minimum of fifty subscribers for the Subscription Milk Tea Box service in three months through targeting residents within the location using social media ads and local community events.
- Improve Customer Experience: Ensure that reviews on Google Reviews and Yelp have a minimum satisfaction rating of 90% by addressing feedback from locals throughout the first six months.
- Increase Product Offerings: Have no less than two new limited-time seasonal flavors or promotions among locals in the first three months that will enhance sales of up to 15% from previous products in this category.
- Strengthen Local Community Engagement: After one year, have partnered with three different local organizations or events to increase brand visibility and engagement into the Lethbridge communities is measured by event attendance and coverage in area media.

Long-Term:

- Establish Brand Loyalty: Achieve a 70% or higher customer retention rate among the locals within the first year by having a program on loyalty that grants repeat customers exclusive discounts or rewards.

- Diversify Income Sources: Obtain 20% of total revenue from non-store sales channels such as e-commerce, merchandise sales and third-party distribution targeting local customers via online promotions and partnerships with local retailers, within the first year.
- Expand Market Reach: Open an added store in a well-chosen location within the Lethbridge region within two years so that it can boost its overall earnings by 25% compared to those realized by previous year among local customers.
- Sustainability Initiatives: Introduce sustainable packaging techniques and reduce single-use plastic materials by up to 20% during the first year with focus narrowed down to environment-friendly measures in the surrounding community.
- Invest in Technology: Launch a mobile app for ordering food within the first year and have at least 10% of all sales through this channel during the following six months. The campaign should focus on reaching out to the local population through in-store adverts and social media platforms.

Marketing Strategy

Profile a “Typical Consumer”

As mentioned before our target market is young individuals between the ages of 18 and 35 who are interested in trying out novel and fashionable beverages were the target market from Infinites's Bubble Tea Subscription Boxes. In Addition to that, we've also discovered a new market niche which would be Influencer's who want to try new drinks from different bubble tea stores and connect with like-minded people who respect convenience. We intend to keep expanding our clientele and satisfying the demands of a wide spectrum of customers by providing items to both this new market segment and our initial target market. We think that adding influencers to our target demographic would help us reach a larger audience and improve the total revenue.

Product Strategy

Our team wants to launch limited edition partnerships with nearby bakeries or cafés to produce distinctive and exclusive syrup and topping combinations, in addition to providing seasonal flavors. For the fall, we may collaborate with a well-known local bakery to develop a unique pumpkin spice latte syrup. This partnership not only gives consumers another delicious alternative, but it also promotes local companies and generates interest in our product range. This will draw in new clients who are searching for creative dessert choices. Customers' experience will be made more exciting by the anticipation of sampling these limited-edition flavors. These partnerships will help us differentiate ourselves from the competition.

Pricing Strategy

For clients who would like to have a more flexible commitment, we are introducing a pay-per-box option in addition to the tiered subscription approach. Customers may now buy single bubble tea boxes instead of committing to a monthly subscription. Additionally, we are launching a referral program wherein current subscribers can receive discounts or complimentary boxes in exchange for encouraging their friends and family to sign up. The purpose of these pricing techniques and tactics is to enhance client retention by appealing to a broader spectrum of consumers.

Place (Distribution Strategy)

To keep up with the increasing demand for our products, we want to expand the frequency of our deliveries to twice a week. We will also be introducing a new delivery scheduling feature that will let consumers select a precise time window for the delivery of their products. By making these improvements to our distribution plan, we can guarantee that consumers will get their purchases on time and that our product offers will be even more valuable. Our objective is to surpass our clients' expectations in addition to meeting them, establishing our reputation as a leader in client happiness and service. The price schedule for the following year will incorporate these extras and improvements, demonstrating the value and advantages that our clients may anticipate when selecting.

Communication Strategy

1. Social and Mobile Media

Mediums: Instagram, Facebook, Twitter, TikTok

Social media platforms offer an excellent opportunity to engage with our audience frequently. We'll utilize Instagram for visually appealing content showcasing our bubble tea flavors and subscription benefits. Facebook and Twitter will be used for community engagement, customer service, and sharing informative content. TikTok presents an exciting avenue for creating engaging, short-form videos to showcase our products and attract a younger demographic.

2. Direct Marketing

Medium: Email

Email marketing allows for direct communication with our subscribers. Once our customers agree, we'll send regular newsletters featuring product updates, promotions, and exclusive offers to keep our subscribers engaged and informed about our latest offerings.

3. Advertising

Mediums: Google Ads, Facebook Ads, Sponsored Content

Paid advertising will be utilized during specific periods to drive traffic to our website and increase subscription sign-ups. We'll strategically allocate a budget for targeted Google Ads related to bubble tea keywords, Facebook Ads to retarget website visitors, and sponsored content on relevant platforms to expand our reach.

4. Public Relations

Mediums: Blog posts, YouTube videos, Podcasts

Content marketing is essential for educating our audience about bubble tea culture, health benefits, and recipe ideas. We'll maintain a blog with informative articles, a YouTube channel featuring how-to videos and behind-the-scenes content, and possibly start a podcast discussing trending topics in the beverage industry.

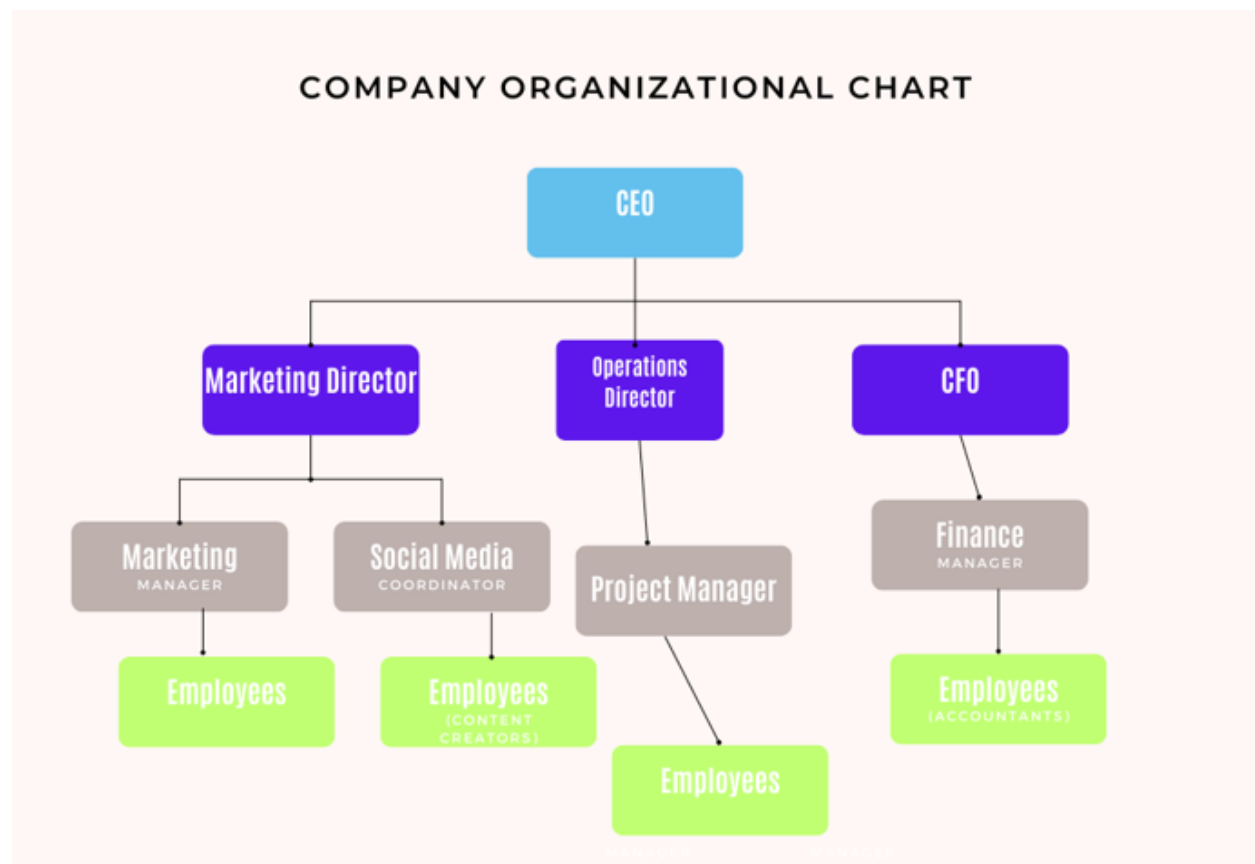

Integrated Marketing Communication Medium Timeline:

Medium	Frequency	Strategy
Social Media	3 or 4 times a week	Continuous
Direct Marketing	Twice a month	Continuous
Advertising	Seasonal	Flighting
Public Relations	Twice a month	Continuous

Marketing Research

Infinitea Bubble Tea Subscription Boxes could use a variety of marketing research techniques to support their strategic marketing decisions in year three, such as trend analysis to stay ahead of industry developments, and customer surveys to get input on current offerings and preferences. In-depth data from a certain demographic might also be obtained through focus groups, and social media monitoring could offer real-time input on customer mood and involvement. In year three, Infinitea will be able to propel their marketing plan with well-informed judgments.

Advertising Budget

Within our $50,000.00 advertising budget, we'll allocate funds strategically across our identified communication mediums to maximize our reach and impact. Digital advertising, including Google Ads, Facebook Ads, and Sponsored Content, will account for most of our budget, representing approximately 60% ($30,000). This allocation will allow us to target specific demographics, retarget website visitors, and expand our online presence effectively. Public relations efforts, including blog posts, YouTube videos, and Podcasts, will be allocated 20% of the budget, equating to $10,000. This allocation will support our content marketing strategy, educating our audience about bubble tea culture, health benefits, and recipe ideas while developing engagement and brand loyalty. Direct marketing via email will receive approximately 15% ($7,500) of the budget, enabling us to maintain direct communication with our subscribers through regular newsletters and exclusive offers. Finally, the remaining 5% ($2,500) of the budget will be reserved for other promotional activities or unexpected expenses, ensuring flexibility in our advertising strategy. By distributing our advertising budget wisely across these mediums, we aim to maximize the impact of our advertising efforts and effectively promote our bubble tea subscription service in the Lethbridge community.

Medium	Budget Percentage	Budget Cost
Advertising/social media	60%	$30,000
Direct Marketing	15%	$7,500
Public Relations	20%	$10,000
Other activities/Unexpected Expenses	5%	$2,500
Total	100%	$50,000

Control

1. Subscription Retention Control

- Control Measure: Monthly subscriber retention rate and churn rate. Calculate the percentage of subscribers retained over a period and the percentage of subscriber lost.
- Purpose of Control: To retain existing subscribers and minimize churn, maximizing the lifetime value of each customer.
- Approach: Identify reasons for subscriber churn through surveys or feedback analysis. Implement retention strategies such as loyalty programs, exclusive offers, or improved customer service to reduce churn and retain subscribers.

2. Social Media Engagement Control

- Control Measure: Number of followers, likes, comments, and shares on media platforms (Facebook, Instagram, TikTok). Track engagement metrics regularly and compare with industry standards.
- Purpose of Control: To assess the effectiveness of social media marketing efforts in engaging and growing the company's online community.
- Approach: Analyze engagement trends and adjust content strategy to increase interaction with followers. Experiment with different types of posts and content formats to drive engagement.

3. Product Quality Control

- Control Measure: Quality assurance checks on ingredients and customer feedback on product quality. Regularly conduct inspections of incoming ingredients and monitor customer complaints or returns related to product quality.

- Purpose of Control: To maintain consistent product quality and customer satisfaction, protecting the company's reputation.
- Approach: Address any issues with ingredient quality or product consistency immediately. Implement quality control procedures to ensure consistent product quality and customer satisfaction.

4. Sales Performance Control

- Control Measure: Monthly subscription box sales revenue and number of new subscribers. Compare actual sales revenue and subscriber numbers against projected targets.
- Purpose of Control: To monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of marketing efforts in generating revenue and acquiring new customers.
- Approach: If actual sales fall below goals, investigate potential reasons such as pricing, promotion effectiveness, or product offering. Adjust marketing strategies accordingly to boost sales.
